Mackenzie is a partner of McDougall Gauley LLP operating out of our Regina office with a practice that covers a wide range of financial and business law matters. A pragmatic problem solver and communicator, Mackenzie draws on his experience managing complex matters to provide practical advice that supports informed decision-making and advances client objectives.

Overview

Mackenzie is a strategic thinker, strong communicator and skilled negotiator. Having served as in-house counsel for a major financial institution, Mackenzie understands that legal decisions are rarely made in isolation and must be evaluated alongside operational, financial, and strategic business priorities. His advice often extends beyond the scope of a transaction or legal issue, helping clients understand and explore broader considerations that impact their business through every stage of growth and change.

He regularly acts for a variety of financial institutions and businesses to help clients navigate complex commercial matters and financing transactions with confidence. He is committed to seeing his clients succeed by taking the time to listen and understand business goals and providing thoughtful, practical solution-driven council.
