Corbin Golding is an associate in McDougall Gauley's Saskatoon office. He maintains a broad practice with a focus on litigation. He has appeared before all levels of court in Saskatchewan and has assisted with appeals before the Supreme Court of Canada.

Overview

Corbin joined the McDougall Gauley team in 2024 as an associate lawyer. Prior to joining the firm, Corbin clerked at the Supreme Court of Canada for Justice Andromache Karakatsanis, and at the Court of Appeal for Saskatchewan for Chief Justice Robert Richards and Chief Justice Robert Leurer.

Corbin earned his Juris Doctor from the University of Saskatchewan College of Law in 2022, graduating with the Law Society of Saskatchewan Gold Medal for achieving the highest academic standing in his graduating class. During law school, Corbin was a managing editor of the Saskatchewan Law Review. He was called to the Bar in June of 2023.

Corbin is proud to call Saskatchewan home. He was born and raised in Moose Jaw, and lives in Saskatoon with his wife and children. He is also a Sessional Lecturer at the University of Saskatchewan College of Law, where he teaches Advanced Legal Research and Writing. In his free time, he enjoys reading, camping, and playing board games.
